

Annapurna Circuit Trekking

Annapurna Circuit Trek is an adventurous 180 kilometers hike around the majestic Annapurna range that includes Annapurna I (8091m)- the tenth highest mountain on earth.

Trekking in the Annapurna region is a dream for many trekkers. Annapurna Circuit Trek is an adventurous 180 kilometers hike around the majestic Annapurna range that includes Annapurna I (8091m)- the tenth highest mountain on earth.

The Annapurna circuit trek follows Marsyangdi River up to Manang valley then climbs down to the melodramatic valley of Kali Gandaki into lower Mustang. The most challenging part of this trek is crossing Thorung La pass at 5416m, which offers close quarter views of Annapurna ranges, Dhaulagiri (8167m), Manaslu (8163m), Tilicho (7134m), Fishtail (6993m), Chulu East (6584m), Pisang (6091m) etc. The Mustang valley is home to world's deepest Kali Gandaki gorge as well as the shrine of Chumi Gyatsa or Muktinath which features a mud statue of Avalokitesvara and an eternal flame. You will also visit culture town of Jomsom (originally Dzong Sak) on the bank of Kali Gandaki river, the home of Thakali people and their unique culture and cuisine.

Numerous variations for trekking routes exist within Annapurna Circuit Trek: You can visit Tilicho Lake (5119 m), the highest altitude lake in Nepal or follow the trail to the forbidden kingdom of Upper Mustang.

The entire Annapurna trekking trail falls under the Annapurna Conservation Area, the largest conservation area in Nepal. The geography and vegetation here range from tropical to alpine highlighting rhododendron and Juniper forests, Himalayan peaks, high altitude pastures, trans-Himalayan valleys, forests, lakes, and glaciers. The area preserves such endangered species as Snow Leopards, Tibetan Argali, Musk Deer, Tibetan Wolf and six species of Himalayan pheasants.

Day 14: Muktinath - Kagbeni 2800m 4 hrs.

This section is really different from the trek in the Marsyangdi side. Here, the climate is relatively dry, and the landscape looks like a desert. The area on the way from Muktinath to Kagbeni is full of caves and you will be surrounded by wonderful geological forms. From Muktinath (3800 meters) the trail gradually descends towards the quaint village of Jarkot, a quaint village with interesting houses and lots of green fields which seem out of place in the brown surround. At this point you can choose between two routes: one goes directly to Jomsom, and the other goes to Kagbeni. Kagbeni is a village worth seeing, with stone houses and narrow alleys. The village is located near the Kali-Gandaki River. This river is huge and has created a very wide valley here. Do not venture north of this village. It is the border to the Mustang area, which is closed to tourists and requires very special permission to visit. (BLD).

Day 15: Day 15 : Kagbeni - Jomsom - Marpha 5.30 hrs

Along the Kali-Gandaki River, as does most of the trek in the next few days. The geological forms you will see on the way around you are really spectacular and you can buy black fossils called Salligrams from the locals. Jomsom, located 2700 meters high is a rather large village. It has a small airport, which will connect you to Pokhara and Kathmandu for the following day. The trek will continue to the small village of Marpha and you will camp for the night. It contains stone houses built on the mountain above the Kali-Gandaki river, with narrow streets paved with flat stones. (BLD).

Day 16: Marpha to Ghasa (1970 m.) 5-6 hours.

Your surroundings will take a dramatic change to green vegetation and a very beautiful view of Dhaulagiri and Annapurna region. You will stay at Ghasa. (BLD).

Day 17: Ghasa to Tatopani (1189 m.). 5-6 hours

The trek begins a gradual descent to Tatopani through valleys, fields and the beautiful Rupse Chhahara (waterfalls). You will stop for lunch at Dana village which is the deepest gorge in the world. You will rest and stay overnight at Tatopani.

Day 18: Tatopani - Ghorepani 2860m 6-7 hours

Hiking which begins with a challenging ascent to Ghorepani. You will stop for lunch at Sikha village, and stay overnight at Ghorepani. The views of the sunset are amazing over Mount Dhaulagiri and Annapurna. (BLD).

Day 19: Is a day of rest at Ghorepani

Today Is a day of rest at Ghorepani with a day hike to the Poon Hill. Poon Hill is the highest hill in the western part of the trek. It gives a birdseye view of the Mustang and Pokhara Valleys as well as the clear view of over 25 snow-capped peaks including the Annapurna range and Dhaulagiri. (BLD).

Day 20: Down to Pokhara for 5-6 hours.

Your trek will continue down for 5-6 hours as you go from Ghorepani to Birethati and the Modi River. From here you will be driven back to Pokhara. (BLD).
