

Bhote koshi River Rafting

The Bhote Kosi is the steepest river rafted in Nepal. With a gradient of 15 m per km, it is a full eight times as steep as the Sun Koshi, which it feeds further downstream. The river carves a steep and direct drop at the top that gradually eases to more placid streams and the calmer pools with a 46-km run at the Lamosunga dam. The rapids here are class IV- V at high flow, and III at lower levels. The Bhote Kosi is used for both rafting and kayaking. The river is steep and continuous with one rapid leading into another. It is only a river which provides a facility for bungee jumping. This Bhote Koshi is the main branch of the Sun Koshi. The Araniko highway follows the river so access and scouting are relatively easy. The upper valley above Bahrabise is impressively narrow with steep hillsides shooting up over 2000m from the river.

Itinerary:

Day 1: East from Kathmandu

We take a trip to 95 km. east from Kathmandu is the starting point Lomosangu- Dam of the trip.

This is a spectacular drive through villages and if weather permits, you will have fantastic mountain views i.e. Ganesh Himal, Langtang etc.

We raft the first 10 km of the MOST exciting stretch of the river and then return to the start to play again the same stretch the next day rather than continue with only half a day paddling to the end.

Drives back to our camp.

Day 2: From upper section-Kathmandu

After breakfast a quick pack up and set out (approx. 9 to 10 a.m.) run white water hit again a class 3 rapid starting from upper section.

You have the second chance to show how your raft team can work well together in challenging rapids.

We have lunch on the river and continue the action until the take out point Dolalghat Bazaar about 2 to 3 p.m. and bus back to Kathmandu.

Our trip is over here.
