The Tamang Heritage Trail is a newly developed trekking trail in the Langtang region, north of Kathmandu. The trail, which was formerly an ancient trading route, provides a one-of-a-kind experience of true Tamang and Tibetan culture, as well as natural beauty, historical and cultural heritage, and the breathtaking vistas of the Langtang range of Himalayas.

The trip begins at Syabrubesi and continues through Goljung, Gatlang, Chilime, Thuman, Rasuwagadhi, and Briddim before returning to Syabrubesi. There is a viewpoint at Goljung Pass that provides excellent views of Langtang, Langtang Ri, Sanjen Himal, and Kerung in China. At Thuman, you may see wonderfully designed monasteries and houses with intricate wood engravings. Every day, both Ani and Monks (Lamas) perform MANE PEME ritual in the Gomba. Briddim, a Tibetan Buddhist settlement on the lap of Langtang Himal, sits at an elevation of 2229 metres. The local cuisine includes plain rice, Tibetan bread, Syakpa (Sherpa stew), potato, Tibetan tea, and Briddim wine. Some of the important festivals celebrated here include Dawa Dangbo Chhiju (February), Chuwa Chhiju (November), Yarsang (early June), Dukpa Chhiju (August), and Lhosar (February). Locals from Goljung and Gatlang villages perform their distinctive Syabru dance during the Ghoda festival and Nepal-Tibet War exhibition.

Other notable places along the trail are Rasuwagadi's mediaeval fort and the holy Parbati Kunda. The walk winds through natural woodlands and stunning alpine landscapes. Trekking the Tamang Heritage Trail without a guide is deemed risky due to its remote location. The Tamang Heritage Trail was restored and developed as part of the United Nations Development Programme's (UNDP) Tourism for Rural Poverty Alleviation Programme (TRPAP), which aims to provide equal tourism opportunities to the region's underprivileged rural populations. Locals contribute to community development through employment-generating enterprises such as homestays, organic farming, livestock, and handicraft production.
